The Basic Sciences curriculum breakdown shows both a score and a percentage. Sometimes, due to rounding, the average scores might show as '0' even though the Basic Sciences curriculum topics are included in the exam. This can happen when there are only a few questions for a single topic. For example, if 40% of candidates get one question right, 40% of 1 rounds to zero. This will also display as a variance in the cohort average compared to the total number of questions and total score.
